Subject: Bureau of Land Management Library Services – Information Within Reach

The BLM has seen tremendous growth in demand for scientific information pertaining to the health and productivity of the public lands. To be responsive to this demand, BLM's resource professionals must have access to current information on technologies, procedures, and studies in their fields – information that will help them make informed choices and decisions. All of this information is "Within Reach" at the BLM Library.

The BLM Library, located in Denver, Colorado, provides professional Library services to all BLM personnel at no charge. The services are offered both "traditionally" where the Library staff performs the services or electronically where the patron can interactively access online information. Online information is available to everyone on the Library's external Internet pages at <http://www.blm.gov/nstc/library/library>. Those services incurring costs to the Library or limited by copyright restrictions are available only through the Library's internal Intranet webpages at <http://web.nc.blm.gov/blmlibrary>.

If you have any questions, suggestions, or comments, please call Barbara Campbell, Library Director, ST-150, at (303) 236-6648 or send email to Barbara_Campbell@blm.gov.
